To the American Society for Healthcare Risk Management:

On behalf of the City of Indianapolis, we look forward to welcoming you in October to your 2015 Annual Conference & Exhibition.

I offer a special and personal assurance to you that Indianapolis remains an open, welcoming, and inclusive city. For decades, our city has been known for extending Hoosier Hospitality to all, and we are excited to extend that warm welcome to ASHRM professionals dedicated to safe and effective patient care, preserving financial resources, and maintaining safe work environments.

Indianapolis is a vibrant destination that will offer a rich environment for professional development and networking with colleagues. We have recently invested more than $3 billion in tourism-related infrastructure, and I am confident these offerings, combined with our extensive cultural amenities and high level of service, will ensure that you have a first-rate experience.

Our city is full of top attractions, world-class performing arts, restaurants for all tastes, and an array of shopping options that can be found throughout downtown and in our eclectic cultural districts. Many of these amenities, as well as 250 acres of green space and museums in White River State Park, are within walking distance of your hotels.

On behalf of our 75,000 hospitality professionals who welcome over 26 million visitors annually, we stand ready to welcome you with open arms. We look forward to ensuring you have a successful and enjoyable conference and a wonderful time in our great city.

Best regards,

Gregory A. Ballard
